Testimony on HJR 12, General Assembly Redistricting
Before the House Policy and Legislative Oversight Committee
Presented by Ann Henkener on behalf of the League of Women Voters of Ohio
November 19, 2014

The League of Women Voters has advocated for redistricting reform for many, many years. Most recently we have supported then Sen. Husted's proposal in 2009 and more recently the bi-partisan LaRose-Sawyer proposal in the last General Assembly. Either of those proposals would have achieved progress in making Ohio's legislature and Congressional delegation more reflective of the political values of Ohio voters. HJR 12 does nothing to advance bi-partisanship.

Ohio is a "battleground" state – its voters are roughly divided evenly between the two major political parties. Voters have selected two United States Senators from different political parties. Ohioans routinely select other statewide office holders from both of the major political parties. Single party gerrymandering has produced artificially large majorities for whichever political party held the pen for redistricting the General Assembly districts and Congressional districts.

HJR 12 begins the process of drawing General Assembly districts with a commission made up of the members of the current Apportionment Board plus an additional appointee from each major party. It has a requirement that at least one vote for approval of a plan must come from each major party. The League supports this part of the process. However, the political composition of the new commission can be determinative of the outcome, just as it is now. There is little incentive for it to compromise with the minority party, because the Governor, Secretary of State and Auditor can declare an impasse and adopt a plan without a single vote from a minority party member. That plan would be in effect for 2 years. It then goes to the voters where the plan drawn by the majority is either approved or disapproved. The only downside for the majority party is that they need to go through the process of drawing another plan. However, it can be very similar, just not identical to the first plan. So with a minimal amount of work, it can adopt another gerrymandered plan that will be in effect for 2 years. This process can continue through the decade.

I urge this Committee and the Ohio House of Representatives to reject this proposal and begin deliberations on a bi-partisan proposal such as the one proposed by Senators LaRose and Sawyer.
